Product Description

Following the suicide of an acquaintance, Abeer was suffering from a cliché case of doomsday syndrome. In a life where all everyone could bring into his life was either medication or addictions.

In this beautiful city with shit stained sidewalks and shit swinging elitism, life felt directionless until a small incident makes him realise he may need the same help he has been trying to extend. While shuffling through multiple therapists, A chance meeting with a woman leads to something far more than he ever imagined. The woman in question was Meera. The woman on the contrary was a being of never-ending optimism in a society full of nihilists.

Would This encounter help Abeer answer some questions which were left unanswered?
